Cannery Row comes alive with music

WINTER MONTHS on the Monterey Peninsula can be difficult at best for musicians and nightclubs. This year business has been busier than normal. Cannery Row nightclubs in particular continue to present quality entertainment and offer a diverse lineup of music.

Carmelites Nico and Rushad will attend a release party for their new CD from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 14 at Casanova Restaurant on Fifth Avenue in Carmel. The duo wrote and performed all the music themselves. Info: 625-6731.

Jonah and the Whalewatchers make their debut performance at the Blue Fin Cafe & Billiards this Saturday night, March 13. Regular performers at Doc's (before Doc's started concentrating on bigger name acts), the Whalewatchers have been in search of a new home and land this weekend on the shores of the Blue Fin. The Monterey Peninsula's premier reggae band features native Jamaican Alex "Bammey" Shirley on bass and vocals plus talented local musicians including drummer John Talon. Music starts at 8 p.m. There is no cover charge.

Across the Row at Sly McFly's, the Firebirds play some Ben Lomond-inspired blues tonight and on Saturday, March 13, San Francisco blues bassist Jake Sampson and his quartet make their McFly's debut performance. Recently signed to the prestigious European Storyville Record label, Sampson was a big hit at last year's Monterey Bay Blues Festival. First show starts at 8:30. There is no cover charge.

THEATER REVIEWS

'Waiting in the Wings:' 'a community treasure'

By TOM BIRMINGHAM and ERIN GAFILL

CARMEL IS blessed with a vibrant and exciting theater community. Besides the Staff Players (SPRT) and Pacific Repertory Theatre there are dance groups and children's companies. Monterey also benefits from a tremendous diversity of venue and talent. Much of the talent in both communities can be traced back to the stage at the Indoor Forest Theatre. The heritage of fine theater craft has been nurtured through training children and staging classical productions strictly with local talent.

When you attend a showing of Noel Coward's "Waiting in the Wings" at the Indoor Forest Theatre, you have a rare opportunity to see that heritage manifest before you. This production should be a community treasure, archived for the ages. So many of the grand dames of Carmel theater take the stage together. You'll never again see so much local talent in one play, a play which draws diverse strengths from each.

This season, SPRT poses an interesting question. "The Young and the Old: Is there a difference?" Janice O'Brien as "May," fills the first act with her presence and self-respect, making it clear that while others may fret and worry about day-to-day problems, she is above it all. That is, until her arch-nemesis, "Lotta," arrives on the scene. Marcia Gambrell Hovick presents a tender turn here, taking the stage just before intermission to unsettle May's comfortable world. As a rival for the affections of a beau from several decades past, Lotta incites the play's conflict. But, as the two proud ladies meet after all these years, the disruptions of the past are put in perspective.

Beautifully nuanced

Hovick's performance is beautifully nuanced, a study in what is not done or said as much as what is. Her grace is wonderfully upstaged at times by Loel Shuler's fiery (and woeful) Deirdre, determined not to go out quietly. Susan Keenan's Miss Archie is spectacular. Each actress brings a wealth of experience and a vital energy to her role.

Though in such an excellent and diverse cast it is impossible to name each standout, one performance begs special mention. Neva Hahns as "Sarita" brightens up the action with her Harpo Marx style and joyful spirit. The smile on her face as she enjoys the flame kindled by simply striking a match — strictly forbidden and ultimately the cause for her removal — is pure delight.

How to juggle so much in such a small space? The stage, designed and constructed by director Nick Hovick, manages to create the illusion of an upstairs and a garden courtyard beyond the sitting room. Each role is defined by small movements — playing cards, cross-stitching — in this ensemble work Hovick's maturity as a director is most striking. He has the right touch with this group, bringing the laughter up just before the tears begin to fall.

Old friends

The staff players have been bringing classical theater to Carmel for 30 years. As the program says, "many of the original members are still part of the company." In this production we get to enjoy the experience of decades and the comfort of seeing old friends work together.

Joyce Woods and Neva Hahns share the stage in Staff Players' 'Waiting in the Wings.'

Williams' 'Cat' at PacRep: Sit back and enjoy the drama

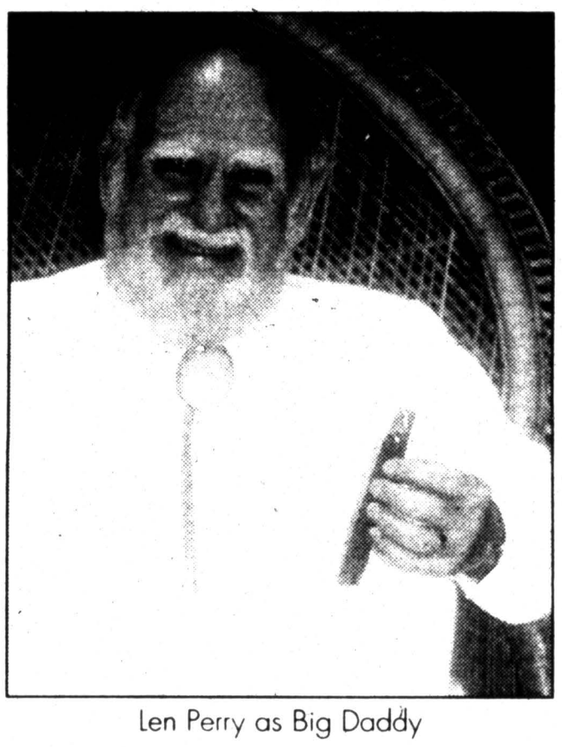

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

CONSIDER FIRST that plays by Tennessee Williams are peopled by outcasts, that most of his outcasts are moral outcasts and that almost all of these characters are miserable.

Consider also what Tennessee Williams had to say about his own work: "I have only one major theme for my work which is the destructive impact of society on the sensitive non-conformist individual."

Pretty deep stuff that. For most of us that sounds more like Psychology 101 than it does a Pulitzer Prize-winning drama. With that understood, let's forget all the esoteric stuff and simply enjoy this powerful drama and the strong, sensitive performances by this talented cast.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" by Tennessee Williams is Pacific Repertory's Spring Season opening presentation, and it is an ambitious project. The set is imaginative, the staging and lighting are close to perfection, and you can clearly hear Big Daddy sniffing the air from the rear of the Golden Bough auditorium. Directed by John Rousseau, this complex drama about an affluent Mississippi family explores the problems that arise when its members find it impossible to tell or face the truth. In other words; everybody in the family lies to each other and to themselves. If not outright lying, they are devious and deceptive with each other.

Len Perry as Big Daddy

Compelling performances

Stephen Moorer, as Brick, is a lush, wallowing in self-pity, and Julie Hughett, as Maggie (the Cat), is his sensual, sexually denied wife. At the play's opening, theirs is a relationship that has already disintegrated. At the play's conclusion there is hope for its survival . . . perhaps. Moorer's and Hughett's compelling Act One performances set the tone for the rest of the play.

Len Perry gives a notable performance as Big Daddy, the pompous, posturing family patriarch who is facing certain, lingering death from cancer and denies it to himself and to his family (more lies), and adds to the family's embittered in-fighting for his money and his love. He later confronts the entire family ensemble with his observation that the house reeks with the "powerful and obnoxious odor of mendacity," much of which is his.

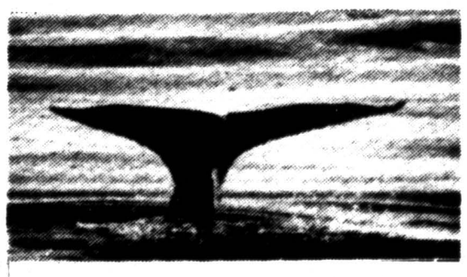

Stephanie Waldrip plays his nosy and noisy wife, Big Mama. She and Caryne Shea, as Mae, Big Daddy's and Mama's daughter-in-law, introduce subtle bits of rare and welcome humor into the play.

Supporting actors Michael Jacobs (Gooper), Phil Clarkson (Reverend Tooker) and Steve Harris (Doctor Bough) each add their solid performances to the cast. Of course, we must not overlook the performances of the children who play the obstreperous offspring of Mae and Gooper.

Though there is some adult language, it is not gratuitous, but prudent, and is essential for the plot development of character and for our understanding of characters.

As director John Rousseau points out in his Playbill notes, this "is not an easy play to understand . . . ," but it is fine Tennessee Williams fare, not really that difficult to follow, and a production that should not be missed.

Cafe Stravaganza approaches food with artistic passion

THESE PEOPLE really know what they're doing, I thought to myself as I sipped the '96 Beaulieu Vineyards Coastal Pinot Noir. The wine was at room temperature and the glass itself had the chill taken off it. What a difference this makes to the appreciation of a really excellent wine!

The pinot was a perfect accompaniment to one of the best aps I've eaten in a long time: Lamb Maqli ($8.50). "Maqli" simply means sauté. In this case, the bite-size pieces of lamb were seared, then sautéed in olive oil with garlic and shallots — before the lemon and wine were added and reduced — then garnished with roasted pine nuts.

This tasty melange was served over hummus — spread within the inner ring of the serving plate — framing the lamb in an appetizing and aesthetic fashion. The flavors wed perfectly, forming a happy union with the pinot noir. For those who prefer a light meal, this dish would be an excellent entrée.

We learned, in an interview the next day with Cafe Stravaganza's artist/chef/entrepreneur Fuad Bahou (co-partner with Debby Corlew), that lamb maqli is served for breakfast in Saudi Arabia, which certainly sits well with my mid-eastern proclivities. (I remember once, on a very early morning flight from Izmir to Athens, breakfast served by the steward consisted of an infinitesimal cup of Turkish coffee, goat cheese, a small portion of hard-crusted bread and kalamata olives. My thoughts were then, wow! this is my kind of breakfast! So you see . . .)

The maqli is only one of many imaginative, Eastern-inspired and Mediterranean dishes on menus that boast 66 items for dinner and 60 for lunch — including vegetarian dishes — plus a number of pizzas, calzones and even burgers.

A 'skillet operation'

Yet with this remarkable number of dishes (the preparation of some is complex), most of the items are cooked to order. Bahou describes Cafe Stravaganza as "a skillet operation," which allows executive chef Matt Crump and sous chef Rubin Arango to be flexible. "If a customer doesn't want salt, we don't use salt," Bahou says.

Bahou, who was born in Jerusalem, half Arab and half Greek, becomes ecstatic talking about herbs and spices: "The implications of herbs and spices!" he enthuses. "It's a science and I have 200 spices and herbs in the kitchen: this arsenal is at my disposal. To taste sumac, tamarind — it goes to the brain!"

Bahou and Corlew's cookbook, "A Different Flavor," is sold at the restaurant, and Bahou has recently interested a publisher in his latest cookbook called "Soup Psyche."

The menu does go on, and is obviously the handiwork of two very creative people. Bahou met Corlew when they were both teaching art at Knoxville College, Tennessee, and where Bahou opened his first restaurant with his brother Shawqi. Eventually they opened 12 restaurants.

Later, feeling the strain of teaching part-time and traveling an 800 mile circuit to attend to his restaurants, Bahou returned to California and UCLA where he had earned an M.F.A. in studio arts years before. He taught art history and studio art there before coming to Carmel and opening Chutneys at the Crossroads with Corlew in 1984.

Chutneys did well for eight years, but outgrew its space. Cafe Stravaganza's current location is commodious, with various sections and rooms, and even then, the restaurant is full a great deal of the time.

There is no other restaurant similar to Cafe Stravaganza: Bahou's framed paintings enliven the walls; one room is a giant mural, and even two new high-backed benches are covered with Bahou's surrealistic designs.

This is a warm and exciting restaurant with innovative, very excellent food. Bahou's welcoming, caring way of being assures return visits by happy patrons. He prepares all the desserts and can be found at the front of the house during the day, leaving his evenings free for studio work (he had a one-man show at Sunset Center last year).

A passion for art and food

A true artist in every sense of the word, Bahou speaks of food as he does his art: with passion. "Just look at the skin on an eggplant!" he instructs. "The coloration, the thickness — and suddenly . . . there's an eggplant inside!"

Bahou also waxes lyrical over his desserts. He asked, 'Did you try my raspberry peanut butter cheesecake? It's like kissing someone you really like!"

Corlew is in charge of the house during the evening and is the wine buyer. Her wine list is a thoughtful and knowledgeable compendium of excellent California wines. Fifths run from $15.50 for an Arciero Estate Classic White from Paso Robles, to a $48 Grgich Hills 1993 Napa Valley Chardonnay.

You can't help but be taken with this restaurant and the two artists who own and run it with love.

Get acquainted with S.F. rogues

BIZARRE AND COLORFUL characters have always abounded in San Francisco, and in Charles F. Adams' new book, "The Magnificent Rogues of San Francisco," you'll meet them all.

Some of them, like Emperor Norton, were over-the-top mad, but the real characters of San Francisco were truly unforgettable, in the Readers Digest sense of the word.

Adams, in a gentlemanly manner, says of some of them that they had notable lapses from propriety: The man who shanghaied crews for ships docked in San Francisco was known as Shanghai Kelly; Judge David Terry and publisher Charles de Young shot a senator and a preacher, respectively. And if you haven't heard of Mammy Pleasant and her House of Mystery (which I hadn't), you will be intrigued, to say the least.

There are a plethora of fascinating people in this 314-page hardcover book ($27.95), and Adams has researched them thoroughly. In a scholarly manner, he includes, at the back of the book, 23 pages of Sources Cited, and five pages of Selected Bibliography. But don't let this deter you from reading this engrossing, well-written book.

You can meet Adams at The Thunderbird's Books and Dinner evening at 6 o'clock, Thursday, March 18. The tab is $17.50. For reservations call 624-1803. The Thunderbird is in The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel.

BOOK CLUBS abound in this very literate corner of the world. Established and brand new bookclubs have been announced by Esther Hicks of Bookworks, 667 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. The established groups are:

• the Bookworks Book Club whose members read a broad range of contemporary literature. Hicks says this group is "very serious, very reserved but with a good sense of humor, and mostly ladies." They meet the first Wednesday of each month 7:30 to 9 p.m.

• the British Mystery Club, composed of 16 or 17 people, is "a very serious, very rowdy, fun loving mixed group." They meet the third Friday of every month from 4 to 6 p.m.

Three new start-up groups are:

• Change your Life Book Club. The book, "Change your Brain, Change your Life" addresses depression and anxiety, generically. Hicks says, "This book is a jumping off point to the question, 'Is there a physiological cause to depression?' and what do you do when you find out if it is or isn't." A professional psychologist will preside. Hicks stresses that this group will be informational only and will not be used as a therapy session. The first meeting is from 7 to 9 p.m., Monday, March 15.

• Creative Writing Group for writers in all genres, will discuss expanding writing talents and publishing opportunities. Mystery author Dianne Day is scheduled for April. The first meeting is 7 to 9 p.m., Wednesday, March 17.

• "Tuesdays with Duffie" group will be chaired by therapist Duffie Bart. This book club will be based on experiencing the world through the mind and eyes of Morrie Schwartz in the book "Tuesdays with Morrie," which is "basically about living and dying." First meeting is from 7:30 to 9 p.m.,Tuesday, March 23.

Meeting area is the coffee shop in the back of the bookstore. For information, call Esther Hicks or George Station at 372-2242.

GATEWAY STAGES ITS FIRST-EVER FUNDRAISER

BEING A social columnist can be pretty cool.

I thought it timely to admit this, given the continuing breathless envy I encounter.

To date, I have already recognized the following:

Perk No. 1: I get to leave a function as early as I want, without hurting any feelings. (The path of my previous social history is littered with wounded egos, thanks to my generally limited tolerance for parties.)

Perk No. 2: I'm spared having to write thank-you notes . . . which are easy to do except when you are sealed-and-delivered-challenged, as I am. Meaning I will have climbed Mount Everest sooner than I will have looked up the address, written it on the envelope, stuck the stamps on it and physically dropped it in a mailbox. Of course, if I need to buy stamps, substitute Mount Everest with the second coming of the Savior.

Perk No. 3: My office space is guaranteed to get tidied up at least once a week, specifically on Sunday evening. That's when, in gathering my various notepads from the week's functions, I realize I'm missing one. So after frantically but fruitlessly digging into various piles, I'm moved to stepping back, counting slowly to 10, and reorganizing the piles in a more sensible manner. This then leads to finding the notepad, which by now has attained the stature of the Holy Grail. (This method — tragically — didn't work this week, but that's another story.)

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

So there! I admit it! Being a social columnist is pretty cool . . .

HERE'S AN observation to mull over, as you read on. People – including myself – have been so busy lamenting the current no-holds-barred press intrusion of private lives, we forget about the drawbacks of those more private times. They were the days when we quietly packed developmentally challenged kids off to state institutions, never to be spoken of in public. Or when women were too embarrassed to share the pain of breast cancer . . .

IT'S HARD to imagine that Gateway Center, so vital to this peninsula for so long, never held a fundraiser until last Friday, March 5th, but it's true. Yet since 1963 this organization has been committed to helping those with disabilities become self-sufficient and independent. And with the guidance of founding member John Wecker and other dedicated individuals, it has done so.

But now it wishes to expand residential and other services. Ergo, the need for this fundraiser at the Hyatt which brought out many loyal supporters.

Mez Benton, whose granddaughter Lisa is at Gateway, "can't say enough about them." Sonya Jacobson, whose son Charlie is another Gateway beneficiary, was also full of praise for the organization's work.

Fundraising board member Alex Hubbard was the escort of sculptor Richard MacDonald's beautiful daughter, Michele Jayson. (MacDonald was especially generous this past week, donating works for auction at both Gateway's event and the Boys & Girls Club benefit.)

The choice of KSBW's Dan Green for emcee, along with Kate Callaghan, was clever indeed, given the roars of laughter Dan kept eliciting from the amused crowd.

Hats off to Gateway's successful fundraising start!

■ Cancer survivors strut stuff

The American Cancer Society presented a delightful fashion show and delicious luncheon at the Corral de Tierra Country Club on March 5th. Cancer survivors looked absolutely radiant as they (both men and women) modeled clothing from various boutiques.

Mario and Dragana Simic at the Gateway Center fundraiser.

Ann Mack, Linda Balesteri, Nancy Porteous-Thomas and Bonnie Gillooly were just a few of those who floated down the runway.

Model Linda Brooks had brought her personal support team in the form of her daughters, Melani Debasitis and Tammy Brooks, and her son's wife Theresa Brooks. If one believes in the healing power of humor, then this particular trio must have been manna from heaven during Linda's recent bout with cancer – their giggles were absolutely infectious. Then again, Melani and Tammy were teasing Theresa over how their brother Brian had serenaded her on the morning of her birthday. Seems they just couldn't picture it . . . .

Well, almost! To raise awareness for "Read Across America Day" on March 2nd, the Pebble Beach Company hosted a fun "Green Eggs and Ham" luncheon March 1st at Spanish Bay.

Kids from Manzanita Elementary School, along with some Monterey County school officials, such as Pacific Grove's District Librarian Nancy Horton, were vastly entertained by Dina Eastwood and others by their jokes and Dr. Seuss storytelling.

Definitely not a stuffy crowd . . .

My alter-ego filed the following copy for me:

■ A great night for the kids

By FLO SNYDER

Attention all members of the Boys & Girls Club of the Monterey Peninsula. You've got great friends and supporters in high places. More than 500 of them packed the Marriott ballroom on March 6th for the sixth annual "Comics for Kids Dinner/Auction" that raised more than $110,000 — and they're still counting.

Letter to Sissi

Thanks to the determination of Tucker Ramsay, the diminutive and dynamic chairperson of the hugely successful event, and her 25-member committee, proceeds topped the previous year's record.

It all began at 5:30 p.m. in the Marriott's

PEOPLE

cavernous foyer with the longest display of silent auction items assembled in recent memory, followed by dinner, a live auction and a finale of hilarious performances by a trio of stand-up comedy acts.

Seemingly all over the place exhorting the enthusiastic crowd to "Bid, bid, bid," Boys & Girls Club President Carla Hudson said she was loving every minute of it and was "just getting warmed up."

Hot on her heels were master of ceremonies Dr. Tim Auger and auctioneer David Armanasco whose expert programming throughout the action-packed evening had every activity covered and conducted on time.

Not an easy thing with this exuberant crowd, among who were super-sponsor table hosts Peter Blackstock of Victory Toyota, Granite Construction's Dave Watts and Mike Thomas and realtor John Saar.

In the parade of Peninsula people inspecting merchandise and entering bids were Rich Brinton and wife Jane, whose spectacular multitiered necklace of gold and black onyx was stopping traffic. Asked if she'd ever consider parting with it for a price, her laughing response was "Everything I have is for sale — except my husband." Laura Stall patiently awaited the outcome of her husband Bill's bidding on an older bottle of wine to add to their well-stocked collection (he wasn't for sale, either). Helpers of all good causes June and Joe LaMantia, taking time off from getting settled in their new Carmel Valley digs, were asked if they'd be bidding on any treasures.

"We always do," stated June, who by evening's end was seen leaving with her arms full, and Joe's wallet empty. Longtime supporters Sam and Patricia Garrett, when not active in the bidding wars, made it clear that their commitment to the Boys & Girls Club was here to stay.

"It's for life," declared lovely Patricia who, together with daughter Alecia and friend Judie Najarian, personally wraps more than 500 Christmas gifts every year for the boys and girls. Also bidding and buying were Dr. Robert Auger and wife Gini. She had the herculean task of putting together the solicitation catalog (a huge endeavor). Barbara and Martin Nicholson (he's head honcho of the Carmel Valley Ranch Resort) were bumping into friends all evening as they made their way through the exhibits and wall-to-wall people. Celebrated Carmel artist Richard Mac Donald donated his magnificent bronze sculpture "The Gymnast" to the auction and had strong words of praise for the work accomplished by the Boys & Girls Club supporters.

Other heroines of the fund-raising bonanza were Peggy Kelley and Barbara Falkenburg who orchestrated the efforts that resulted in the amazing cache of live and silent auction items. And while she may have been too tired to raise her bid card for even the best of bargains, assistant executive director of the Boys & Girls Club Donna Perraro was positively beaming over the teamwork of volunteers, donors and staff. "The work of this winning combination will be manifested in the lives of countless youngsters who enter our facilities year after year," she said.

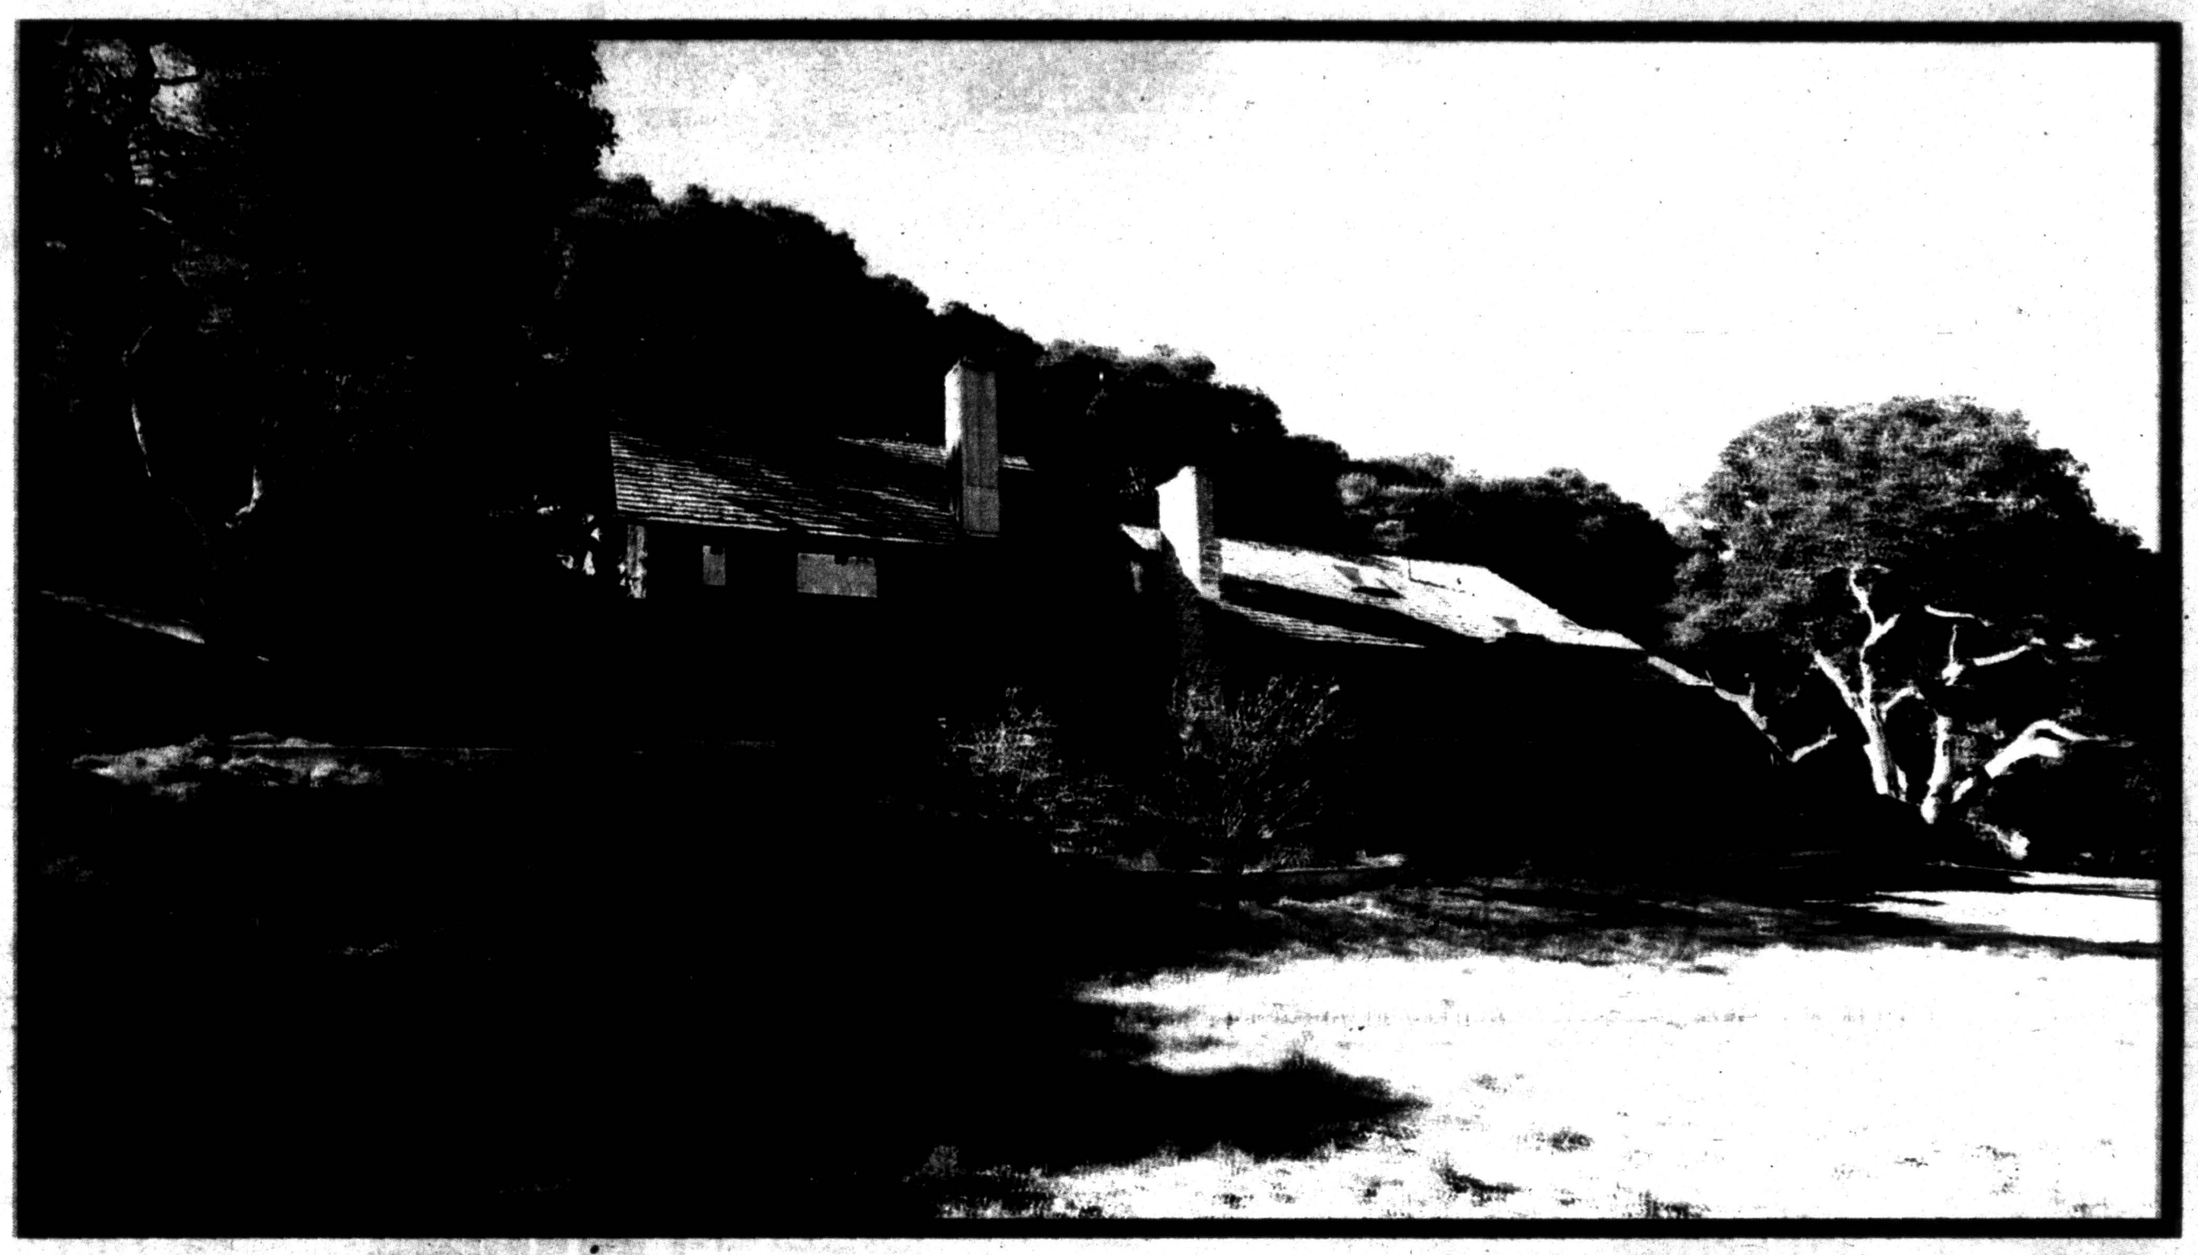

Well done, and kudos to all.

Stevenson high school students get new dormitory

By PAUL MILLER

AN IMPRESSIVE new building is rising at Robert Louis Stevenson school in Pebble Beach.

After it is finished this summer, the 18,000-square-foot building will become the school's newest dormitory and home to 46 lucky high school students. It will also include four faculty apartments.

"This is the last building in our dorm-replacement program," RLS Headmaster Joe Wandke explained this week.

The $4 million dorm will replace venerable Balfour Hall, which was built in the late-1950s.

An $4 million dormitory is being built in Del Monte Fores for the students of Robert Lewis Stevenson School. An old dorm will be torn down to make way for a new student center.

"Balfour was well-loved but was also very dated and inefficient and was near the end of its useful life," Wandke explained.

The new, three-story building — with its distinctive, octagonal towers — can be seen just beyond the ball fields on Forest Lake Road.

"We want to give our boarding students, who are 14 to 18 years old, an up-to-date facility in which to live, with plenty of opportunities for faculty and students to interact," Wandke said. "After all, for four years this is their home."

Stevenson School was founded in 1952 as the Del Monte School for Boys.

It has since become one of the country's pre-eminent private high schools. This year, the school's 500 students come from 16 states and 16 countries. Half of the students live on campus.

Tuition, room and board run about $25,000 a year, according to the school. Day students pay $14,600.

"Every year we have about four times as many applicants as we have spaces for new students," Wandke explained proudly, "and that tells you quite a bit about the quality of the education we provide and the way we care for our kids."

Balfour Hall is scheduled to be demolished soon after the new dormitory is finished.

Wandke said it will be replaced by a new student center, which is planned for completion in 2001.

A number of facilities which are spread around the campus — including the infirmary, the student store, the radio station, the student activities office and student lounges — will be relocated to the new building, which will be called the Rosen Family Student Center after a local family which has made a "seven figure" gift to help pay for the new building.

Commission struggles with wood window requirement

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AFTER A prolonged discussion about the city's policy that only all-wood windows are acceptable for new houses and remodels in the village, the Carmel Planning Commission cautiously opened the door for windows that include other materials.

The commission asked planning staff to study the possibility for "expanding the range" of window materials. However, commissioners also decided that if a homeowner chooses clad windows over wood, that person will have to appear before the planning commission and explain why.

The commission was acting on a request from the city council to take a second look at the "standard condition" requiring wood windows. That condition was added by staff two years ago at the request of the planning commission.

The wood window question was raised when a homeowner appealed the requirement to the city council in January. Ann Solon wanted to install high-quality aluminum clad windows to cut down on continual repairs and costs incurred by her wood windows.

The commission held a workshop on window materials in January in which manufacturers showed commissioners the latest advancements in clad windows.

Clad windows — including those made by Andersen and Pella — are widely considered to be the best choice for new homes because they combine durability with good looks.

"From the street, you can't tell these windows from all-wood windows," one homeowner commented.

Carmel planning staff recommended that the commission expand the window options for homeowners. "It appears that 'solid wood' framed windows are increasingly becoming a thing of the past," Carmel Senior Planner Ben Berto commented in his staff report.

Some commission members weren't satisfied that the advancements in clad windows were up to Carmel standards.

"We degrade our city a piece at at time when we take away the individuality we have, that in this case wood affords," said Commissioner Frank Wasko.

Other commissioners argued that advancements are inevitable. "I think we have a problem here of trying to retain a Williamsburg notion of Carmel frozen in the amber of time," said Commissioner Robin Wilson. "One of our jobs is to adapt the aesthetics of the town to constantly changing technology."

Commissioner Pope Coleman railed against a "broad brush" approach.

"In no place do we acknowledge that when a house is being remodeled that windows in the new addition would be comparable to the windows in the old addition," Coleman said. "Even in new construction, if the architectural style is such that old-fashioned divided light windows are not appropriate, the architects can certainly come in here and explain why."

The wood window requirement gained a lot of attention last May when Carmel couple Lori and Erik Davidson mistakenly installed aluminum clad wood windows instead of all wood windows.

The misunderstanding nearly cost the couple $25,000. However, the commission decided to grant a "retroactive approval" for the Davidsons after determining that the wood window requirement was not as clear as it could be.

and teachers who commit their time to area youth — by the comments made at a recent board of supervisors meeting by the supporters of the proposed community life center. I take exception when they ask for permission to build what they say will be a wholesome, moral place for kids to go and have something to do, as if the Carmel Youth Center doesn't fit those criteria.

I'm especially perplexed as numerous community youth organizations and the church itself have used our facility on numerous occasions over the years to hold their youth-group activities.

I would never be opposed to a project that would benefit the youth of this community, since the youth are rarely acknowledged by this community. But I ask, why would someone want to build a facility that duplicates existing facilities and programs to the detriment of other organizations? As a non-profit organization that gets no financial support from the city or any other government agency, we struggle every year to fund our programs. Other youth programs and the schools struggle financially as well. It would be nice, instead of feeling the need to build a new facility, if contributions were made to the existing school and community youth programs that benefit everyone.

The thousands of Carmel youth who have come through the doors of the center for the past 50 years would testify that there is already a place for kids in Carmel. Maybe the community should recognize it is still here and support it instead of trying to replace it. I believe that is what "community" is about. It seems to me to be the moral thing to do.

Pat Lentz,
Director of the Carmel Youth Center

Why not the Marines?

Dear Editor,

Since you asked the question in your editorial of last week, let me give you a few reasons why the Marines should not be allowed to stage their Urban Warrior landing exercise in Monterey.

Reason number 1: The armed forces have 440 military bases in the continental United States with thousands of square miles designated to the sole use of getting the troops battle ready. In Monterey County alone, the Marines have access to 162,000 acres of training grounds at Fort Hunter Liggett, for that purpose. Most of those training grounds are either not as environmentally sensitive or, unfortunately, have already been degraded by use and abuse over the years. They hardly depend on the use of Del Monte Beach and Monterey City streets for their maneuvers.

Reason 2: The Monterey Bay is part of the largest National Marine Sanctuary in the US. This designation was hard-fought and our tourist economy depends on it. The City of Monterey is doing a good job of restoring the Del Monte Beach area for the enjoyment of residents and tourists. Running landing exercises over that same area seems completely at odds with those objectives. Surely the Marines don't need to rely on training on a beach that is part of a National Marine Sanctuary and at the center of a prime tourist attraction.

Reason 3: An estimated 200 million dollars are being spent on hazardous material clean-up at Fort Ord in a series of projects that will probably last a decade. A good portion of that money is being spent on the restoration of the beach areas. It hardly makes sense to be condoning further damage (even if it is small by comparison and even if the Marines promise that they will clean up after themselves) just a few miles from this major clean-up site. As good stewards of the magnificent piece of the planet we live on, we owe it to ourselves to take better care of it.

Reason 4: This is not about opposing the military, the Marines, or their need to be prepared for their missions around the world. In your editorial you imply that only radicals from Santa Cruz oppose this use of our beaches. Let's hear the public opinion before we go forward. I think you may very much misjudge the view of a large portion of Monterey Peninsula residents who have expressed time and again that protection of the environment and especially of our shoreline is one of their highest priorities. Of course it's hard to gauge public opinion without a public debate and since the Monterey City Council has been rather discrete about the whole affair that debate has not happened yet. It's unfortunate that only now, a few days before the Urban Warrior exercise, residents are finally learning about what is being planned in their city. So if we believe that the Marines' purpose is indeed to protect our democracy and our right to a free and open debate, then let's have one and find out whether or not an overwhelming majority of residents would agree that urban warfare training has no business in a National Marine Sanctuary or on the streets of Monterey. Until then, let's cancel the exercise.

Forest Theater's history

Dear Editor,

Thank you for your article in last week's Pine Cone regarding the Forest Theater Guild's 50th Anniversary Season.

As this year's President of the Forest Theater Guild, I am writing to clarify and elaborate on a couple of points that were mentioned in your article.

The Forest Theater is the oldest outdoor theater west of the Rocky Mountains.

It is believed that dramatist Mary Austin first proposed the theater in 1908. Shortly thereafter her literary friends, Herbert Heron and Michael Williams, took up the idea and enlisted others in the community to find a site and form a group known as The Forest Theater Society.

The Carmel Land Development Company (which then owned most of the real estate in Carmel-by-the-Sea) gave the society a long-term lease on the current site (without rent) and advanced the necessary capital to build the stage and enough wooden benches to seat about 600. Opening night at the Forest Theater was in the summer of 1910.

In 1925, the society purchased the 16 lots on which the theater is located for the sum of $2,000.

In 1937, the property was deeded to the City of Carmel, which still owns and maintains the facilities. When the city took title to the property, funds became available from the Federal Works Administration for vital repairs and construction on the stage and seating areas.

Upon completion of the construction project, Herbert Heron reopened the theater and ran productions there until the outbreak of WWII. The theater was "dark" from the end of 1941 until 1947.

In 1949, the Forest Theater Guild was created and officially registered with the State of California as a "not-for-profit organization." The guild flourished under the early leadership of Herbert Heron and Cole Weston.

Weston, Heron and Philip Oberg (among others) were responsible for the creation of the underground theater that now houses the successful Children's Experimental Theater.

By 1971, the Forest Theater had fallen into disrepair and the city council began to consider terminating the theatrical use of the facilities, in favor of turning the property into a city yard.

Led by Weston, Jean Snow and other members of the guild, enormous community support for Forest Theater was demonstrated at public hearings on the matter. As a result of this outpouring of community support the city agreed to undertake the needed repairs and to continue the theatrical existence of the Forest Theater.

More recently, in a collaborative effort with the Forest Theater Guild and Pacific Repertory Theater, we were able to obtain generous funding from the Packard Foundation for new, permanent lighting and sound equipment at Forest Theater.

The Forest Theater Guild is currently one of three major users of the city-owned facilities on Mountain View between Santa Rita & Guadalupe. The other two being our aforementioned friends at Pacific Repertory Theater and the indoor Children's Experimental Theater.

Each of these wonderful groups uses the Forest Theater at the discretion of the City of Carmel, which has complete dominion over the use and maintenance of the facility.

We encourage everyone in Carmel to support and attend the productions at Forest Theater, which is an important part of our ongoing cultural heritage as well as a whole lot of fun.

Again, thanks to the Pine Cone for your support and coverage of the Forest Theater Guild's 50th Anniversary season.

Carmel fun for kids, "fog or no fog"

Dear Editor,

I totally disagree with Beverly Borgman's column (Feb. 19, "Carmel not a kids' town, never was, never will be"). I loved coming here as a child. All those wonderful visits are a whole part of why I moved here eleven years ago, and why I brought my children here year after year for a whole week's stay. It was safe, beautiful and fun. My now-adult children continue to enjoy their visits. Not all kids need an overdose of Disneyland, and many families enjoy and entertain each other during quiet vacations, fog or no fog.

Canine police unit

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Monterey Police Citizens' Academy Alumni Association, I would like to express our deep appreciation to Tamara Grippi for the excellent article regarding the Monterey Police Department's new Canine Unit (Feb. 5).

Tamara's article not only captured the spirit of the Academy and the involvement of the community in this project but she conveyed the dedication that officers feel toward this program and the respect and trust that they place in their canine partners.

Keeley bill would give Hatton Canyon to Reg. Park District

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

ASSEMBLYMAN FRED Keeley introduced a bill in the state legislature this week that would turn Hatton Canyon — owned by Caltrans since the 1950s — over to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

The park district board has waged a long fight against the freeway that has been planned for 40 years to run through the scenic canyon east of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Last year, the Monterey County Grand Jury criticized the park district for its "overly political" campaign against the freeway.

But Keeley's bill — if it is passed — would be a huge victory for the park district and its former general manager, Gary Tate.

Keeley said he hopes that the Transportation Agency of Monterey County, which has constantly reaffirmed its support for the freeway over the years, will change its mind when it meets March 24.

Supervisor Tom Perkins, a staunch advocate of the freeway, retired from the board — and from TAMC — this year. His replacement, Lou Calcagno, has expressed serious doubts about the Hatton Canyon freeway project.

"This beautiful canyon should be saved for future generations to enjoy in its natural state," Keeley said.

His bill would also require Caltrans to make improvements to the existing Highway One to help relieve the traffic congestion which has plagued the Highlands and the mouth of Carmel Valley for decades.

Even if TAMC reaffirms its support for the highway project, the California Coastal Commission could kill it.

Hatton Canyon itself is not in the coastal zone. But two tiny pieces of the right-of-way — at both ends, where it meets the existing highway — are subject to coastal commission jurisdiction.

The commission gave preliminary approval to the freeway in 1996, but the commission's membership has almost completely changed since then.

House of the Week

DOWNTOWN SANCTUARY

Open Saturday 12:00-2:00 • Torres SE Corner of 5th

ONE BLOCK TO TOWN and still one of the most private homes in Carmel-By-The-Sea. The level corner lot is set high up from the street and bordered by a screen of forest vegetation, creating great privacy for the large brick patios off the living room and master bedroom of this garden home. Enjoy the whitewashed brick fireplace on chilly days in the bright living room. Sun pours onto the patios and through the living room's floor-to-ceiling wall of glass - fantastic windows bring the outside in. The addition of a second story master bedroom would have outstanding Pt. Lobos views!
